Goals of the Course

The course is designed to help students develop critical skills which can be applied both in academic and practical settings. We will examine historical trends and issues in social psychology. Students will be assigned a different reading each week and we will consider the reading in detail. Assigned readings will be on 3 hour reserve in the library. A major focus of the course will be on a term paper in which students interview people about lived-experiences relating to a social phenomenon (e.g., love, abuse, and so on) of interest to the students and interpret these experiences.

Evaluation

There will be a midterm exam (two hours), a final exam (three hours), and a term paper (20 pages minimum). Each exam will involve two essay questions and students will be given five single-spaced pages to develop an answer (along with an outline). The questions will be distributed to the students two weeks before the exam. Answers to the questions will be written from memory and no notes will be permitted in the classroom. The 20 page (minimum) term paper will explore a phenomenon from everyday life that is of interest to the student. Working with the professor, the student will define the problem and then interview people to obtain information about real events in which the phenomenon was manifested. These episodes will form the basis for the paper. In addition, the student will search the literature for relevant concepts after the episode data are collected and interpreted. They then compare their ideas with those in the literature (when available) and reflect on the overall process.

Students with a disability/health consideration are encouraged to approach Tina Doyle, Coordinator, at the AccessAbility Services Office @287-7560. They can also drop by the office, S302B, inside the Resource Centre. The Coordinator is available by appointment to assess specific needs, provide referrals and arrange appropriate accommodations.
