Course Description

This is a seminar course focused exclusively on personality disorders (PDs) as defined, conceptualized and operationalized in the fifth edition of the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders(DSM-5) (APA, 2013), which is due for release May, 2013. In this seminar the focus is on the 10 personality disorders, which will appear in Section 2, Chapter 7 of DSM-5 “Personality Disorders”. We will also address the proposed hybrid model of Section 3 of DSM-5 – Emerging Models and Measurements. This proposed model for personality psychopathology was influenced by a number of different pre-existing models of personality and personality psychopathology; as such, this course will also explore these models.

As this is a seminar course, students are encouraged and expected to participate in class discussion. Such participation, of course, requires that students have read the required material assigned for each class. To facilitate class participation preparation, a brief 10-15 minute quiz on the assigned reading material will be administered prior to each class. The questions are straightforward and designed to ensure only that you have read the material.

As it is also important that students have a general familiarity with the diagnostic criteria for each of the Section 2 PDs prior to launching into detail discussion of each disorder, in the third week of the seminar, students will be offered an opportunity to demonstrate this familiarity via a 2 hour exam focused exclusively on the diagnostic criteria for each of the ten PDs.

Note: Course announcements will generally be made through Blackboard. Please monitor the course website and your University email address regularly for important announcements.

Academic Integrity

Academic integrity is fundamental to learning and scholarship at the University of Toronto. Participating honestly, respectfully, responsibly, and fairly in this academic community ensures that the U of T degree that you earn will be valued as a true indication of your individual academic achievement, and will continue to receive the respect and recognition it deserves.

Familiarize yourself with the University of Toronto's Code of Behaviour on Academic Matters (<http://www.governingcouncil.utoronto.ca/policies/behaveac.htm>). It is the rule book for academic behaviour at the U of T, and you are expected to know the rules. Potential offences include, but are not limited to:

In papers and assignments:

- Using someone else's ideas or words without appropriate acknowledgement.
- Copying material word-for-word from a source (including lecture and study group notes) and not placing the words within quotation marks.
- Submitting your own work in more than one course without the permission of the instructor.
- Making up sources or facts.
- Including references to sources that you did not use.
- Obtaining or providing unauthorized assistance on any assignment including
  - working in groups on assignments that are supposed to be individual work,
  - having someone rewrite or add material to your work while "editing".
- Lending your work to a classmate who submits it as his/her own without your permission.

On tests and exams:

- Using or possessing any unauthorized aid, including a cell phone.
- Looking at someone else's answers
- Letting someone else look at your answers.
- Misrepresenting your identity.
- Submitting an altered test for re-grading.

Misrepresentation:

- Falsifying or altering any documentation required by the University, including doctor's notes.
- Falsifying institutional documents or grades.

To remind you of these expectations, and help you avoid accidental offences, I will ask you to include a signed Academic Integrity Checklist with every assignment. If you do not include the statement, your work will not be graded.

The University of Toronto treats cases of academic misconduct very seriously. All suspected cases of academic dishonesty will be investigated following the procedures outlined in the Code. The consequences for academic misconduct can be severe, including a failure in the course and a notation on your transcript. If you have any questions about what is or is not permitted in this course, please do not hesitate to contact me. If you have questions about appropriate research and citation methods, seek out additional information from me, or from other available campus resources like the U of T Writing Website or U of T writing centre (<http://ctl.utsc.utoronto.ca/twc/>). ### Academic Integrity Checklist

PSYD32H3 – Personality Disorders: Summer 2013

Course Instructor: R. Michael Bagby

I, _____, affirm that this assignment represents entirely my own efforts.

I confirm that:

- I have acknowledged the use of another's ideas with accurate citations.
- If I used the words of another (e.g., author, instructor, information source), I have acknowledged this with quotation marks (or appropriate indentation) and proper citation.
- When paraphrasing the work of others, I put the idea into my own words and did not just change a few words or rearrange the sentence structure
- I have checked my work against my notes to be sure I have correctly referenced all direct quotes or borrowed ideas.
- My bibliography includes only the sources used to complete this assignment.
- This is the first time I have submitted this assignment (in whole or in part) for credit.
- Any proofreading by another was limited to indicating areas of concern which I then corrected myself.
- This is the final version of my assignment and not a draft.
- I have kept my work to myself and did not share answers/content with others, unless otherwise directed by my instructor.
- I understand the consequences of violating the University's academic integrity policies as outlined in the Code of Behaviour on Academic Matters.

By signing this form I agree that the statements above are true.

If I do not agree with the statements above, I will not submit my assignment and will consult the course instructor immediately.
