Overview:

This course surveys the developments in Western philosophy and science that influenced the emergence of European psychology in the second half of the 19th century, and American psychology soon thereafter.

In particular we will begin with the ancient Greek philosophers, and consider the contributions of European scholars from the 15th through 19th centuries. The 20th Century schools of psychoanalysis, functionalism, structuralism, gestalt, behaviorism, and phenomenology will also be covered.

This course emphasizes the role of social-societal-historical context in the development of psychological thought, and the progress of this discipline in North America. To compensate for the sometimes limiting impact of social context we will also study psychologists who were marginalized in the past due to factors such as race and gender.

Objectives:

By the end of this course you should be able to:

- Create a timeline of the major schools of thought as discussed in this course (e.g., British Empiricism, behaviorism)

- Compare and contrast scholars (e.g., Descartes, Locke, James, Wundt) based on their views given the three fundamental themes (mind/body, epistemology, morality).

- Differentiate between psychology as a discipline and psychology as a profession.

- Differentiate between internal and external factors that shaped the history of psychology, and use this distinction to critically assess psychology as it is today.

Academic Integrity:

Academic integrity is essential to the pursuit of learning and scholarship in a university, and to ensuring that a degree from the University of Toronto is a strong signal of each student's individual academic achievement. As a result, the University treats cases of cheating and plagiarism very seriously. The University of Toronto's Code of Behaviour on Academic Matters (http://www.governingcouncil.utoronto.ca/policies/behaveac.htm) outlines the behaviours that constitute academic dishonesty and the processes for addressing academic offences.

Potential offences include but are not limited to: IN PAPERS AND ASSIGNMENTS: Using someone else's ideas or words without appropriate acknowledgement. Submitting your own work in more than one course without the permission of the instructor. Making up sources or facts. Obtaining or providing unauthorized assistance on any assignment.

ON TESTS AND EXAMS: Using or possessing unauthorized aids. Looking at someone else's answers during an exam or test. Misrepresenting your identity.

IN ACADEMIC WORK: Falsifying institutional documents or grades. Falsifying or altering any documentation required by the University, including (but not limited to) doctor's notes.

All suspected cases of academic dishonesty will be investigated following procedures outlined in the Code of Behaviour on Academic Matters. If you have questions or concerns about what constitutes appropriate academic behaviour or appropriate research and citation methods, you are expected to seek out additional information on academic integrity from your instructor or from other institutional resources (see http://www.utoronto.ca/academicintegrity/resourcesforstudents.html)
