Overview of course content and policy: This course focuses on theory and research in the area of socialization. In the first part of the term, we will examine topics such as the concept of conscience; the development of moral judgment; self-regulation and moral behaviour. Classes in the first part of the term consist of lecture/discussion. In the second part of the term, class members will examine other selected issues relevant to socialization processes and social development in the context of seminar presentations.

Examination: There will be a term examination (essay format) on October 16. The exam covers material from class lectures and from the required reading during the first part of the term.

Seminar presentation and paper: During the second part of the term, there will be individual student seminar presentations concerning salient controversies in the area of social development and socialization. You each will also write a paper on your seminar topic. You will be choosing a seminar presentation topic early in the term from a list provided by Prof. Dion. More information about the format for the seminar presentation and the paper will be provided when the topics are chosen.

Seminar participation: In addition to your own seminar presentation and paper, seminar participation (taking part in class discussion, asking questions about others' seminar presentations) is another component of this course. More details about the format for seminar participation during the second part of the term will be provided when the topics are chosen.

E-mail from you concerning this course should be sent from your University of Toronto e-mail address, either your UTSCID or your UTORID.

Academic Integrity:

Academic integrity is essential to the pursuit of learning and scholarship in a university, and to ensuring that a degree from the University of Toronto is a strong signal of each student's individual academic achievement. As a result, the University treats cases of cheating and plagiarism very seriously. The University of Toronto's Code of Behaviour on Academic Matters (<http://www.governingcouncil.utoronto.ca/Assets/Governing+Council+Digital+Assets/Policies/PDF/ppjun011995.pdf>) outlines the behaviours that constitute academic dishonesty and the processes for addressing academic offences. Potential offences include, but are not limited to:

In papers and assignments:

- Using someone else's ideas or words without appropriate acknowledgement;
- Submitting your own work in more than one course without the permission of the instructor;
- Making up sources or facts;
- Obtaining or providing unauthorized assistance on any assignment.

On tests and exams:

- Using or possessing unauthorized aids;
- Looking at someone else's answers during an exam or test;
- Misrepresenting your identity; and
- When you knew or ought to have known you were doing it.

In academic work:

- Falsifying institutional documents or grades;
- Falsifying or altering any documentation required by the University, including (but not limited to) doctor's notes; and
- When you knew or ought to have known you were doing so.

All suspected cases of academic dishonesty will be investigated following procedures outlined in the Code of Behaviour on Academic Matters. If students have questions or concerns about what constitutes appropriate academic behaviour or appropriate research and citation methods, they are expected to seek out additional information on academic integrity from their instructors or from other institutional resources.

Note:

You may see advertisements for services offering grammar help, essay editing and proof-reading. Be very careful. If these services take a draft of your work and significantly change the content and/or language, you may be committing an academic offence (unauthorized assistance) under the Code of Behaviour on Academic Matters.

It is much better and safer to take your draft to the Writing Centre as early as you can. They will give you guidance you can trust. Students for whom English is not their first language should go to the English Language Development Centre.

If you decide to use these services in spite of this caution, you must keep a draft of your work and any notes you made before you got help and be prepared to give it to your instructor on request.
